oldie but a goodie... and good insight and advice never goes out of style. One of the only books I've read about designing your entire life so that you achieve maximum energy. It's not just about exercise, diet, and limiting your commitments. It's about energy engineering and how you approach your work and your life. I first read this in the 90s and then went looking for it recently; it still rings true and has helped me tremendously (so many things I had forgotten)! Would highly recommend this as a great book for anyone feeling just a little overwhelmed from the endless small details, the to-do lists, and the "day-liness" of life. Rediscover your passion and your joy!

I brought my toys to the office and started taking regular juggling breaks. Using some of the strategies in the book, I transformed myself and my team. Now, years later, I've found myself rediscovering the book, and sharing it with my new team -- although I'd incorporated many of the strategies into my work and home life, I'm re-applying some of the forgotten messages and strategies. This book is nothing short of life-changing. I also love the illustrations! The ONLY negative I have about the book is that I think the original larger format was a better package -- that edition had a very fun color road map / chapter listing on the inside covers that added a great deal to the look and feel of the book. (I was happy to find that the content had remained the same.) I recommend this book to team leaders as well as team members. DO THE EXERCISES!

Great book for Students, Employees, Bosses By music lover I first came across this book more than 10 years ago, when as a doctor I was asked to give a lecture on stress management. It was life-changing for me, both at work and in my leisure time, as well-- because it taught me how to play again, and to allow myself to enjoy sports at the same time I was driven to excell. I recommend this book all the time to colleagues, patients and students. And I'm now buying a copy for my teenaged daughter, a competitive athlete who is combatting burnout. These skills should be graduation requirements for every high school student.
